

Conclusion.

At the conclusion of these lectures entitled « Lectures on Introduction to Law ». Addressed to the first-year students of common core – L.M.D - Commercial and Management Sciences, University of Djelfa, during the 1st semester, Academic season: 2023 – 2024. We arrive at the idea that law has great importance in the lives of people and university students in particular, because it is linked to the requirements of university study at various specializations and levels, and the university student must have sufficient and serious study to develop their requirements in scientific research.

Through these lectures, we touched on simple concepts and clear ideas to provide an introduction to the law that helps in subsequent studies. We find that it deals with the concept of law and its characteristics, and the interrelation of legal rules with other sciences or rules of behavior, so that we have a clear conception of the law in general. Then we touched on the divisions of the law and its various sources, represented by the official sources (original / backup), and the unofficial sources (jurisprudence and judiciary), and also to the scope of application of the law in terms of people, and in terms of place and time.

We have made sure that these lectures are supported by modern and valid legal texts, and with illustrative examples, because by example the situation becomes clear, so that the university student can understand the legal text and realize its impact in the field of economic, commercial, and management sciences, especially since he will later study legal topics in his university studies, such as law Tax, commercial law, monetary law, consumer protection law, etc..

Provided that these lectures contribute to spreading the university student's legal understanding, so that he can complete his specialized university training, whether in terms of economic, commercial, and management sciences, or in legal sciences, so that he can be a successful student.

THANKS ALLH.
